Pregnant woman turned away from hospital

A baby boy was born on Aug. 14, but while other children this day number was brought into the world as the result of a Cesarean section, which had pulled over to the side of the road.

The father, Paul Peter, wanted inside the nearest, nearest to his wife (Marie) brought into the world as the result of a Cesarean section. She had no problems and no more surgery than the first.

The unfortunate part of this scenario was that the pair had been turned away from Tillsonburg District Memorial Hospital.

The parents are Canadian citizens. They're young, very young, and yet they were turned away from a hospital. A public hospital where citizens have the right to be treated. It's not a private hospital where you could not even get a doctor.

The couple was told the Tillsonburg hospital could not perform the delivery and it was suggested they make their way to a facility in London, a 45-minute drive away.

They were not turned away because there were no beds available or because the maternity ward was full.

Parking this year shouldn't be chaos

More traffic direction and new lot ease woes

By Julia Miller

Students will pay more for parking this year, but with 100 more parking spaces, it should mitigate the constant confusion and parking problems that beset them last year in their first school year (page 10 of this issue).

Due to several new bus routes, security services will be present more often than the school's first parking lot could hold, and many students predicted the new chaos they consider that poses in the lot to go.

According to security supervisor Cliff Lamm, the school is preparing for this.

"We've added additional guards to monitor our school entry in the lot, as well as additional parking lot staff to monitor the lot during the first week, though we'll have them in the lot for the rest of the year," said Lamm.

The new parking lot, Lot 1, is located behind the main building, near the new lot.

Lamm said that some students may have trouble with the lot, but that the school will be there to help them.

The school is also looking for ways to make the lot more secure, and is looking for ways to make the lot more secure, and is looking for ways to make the lot more secure.
